ANNOUNCES THE

2020 R. PALMER HOWARD DINNER

FRIDAY, APRIL 24TH

Enslaved Women, Slaveholders, and Doctors: a Peculiar Medical Entanglement

Enslaved women of the antebellum South wanted to maintain control of their bodies during pregnancy and to experience childbirth according to time-honored notions of correct procedure, but slaveholders and physicians each sought to take charge of childbirth in the slave quarter.

Marie Jenkins Schwartz, Ph.D., author of Birthing a Slave: Motherhood and Medicine in the Antebellum South, will discuss this struggle at this year's R. Palmer Howard Dinner.
